

Matt Rogers

Matt Rogers is a research scientist at the Cooperative Institute for Research in the Atmosphere (CIRA) at Colorado State University. Dr. Rogers splits his time between research using observations of cloud and other atmospheric properties from satellites and performing public relations, education, and outreach duties for CIRA. He has worked on the NASA CloudSat and Orbiting Carbon Observatory missions, and now works in the Meteorology and Satellite Applications Group at CIRA.

